I am delighted to announce the publication of "Brainwave: A Multidisciplinary Journal" (Volume No. 5 and Issue No.4) by Brainware University, West Bengal, India. I am of firm belief that the articles in this issue will generate motivation in readers for research activities in several multidisciplinary areas of contemporary interest.

The submitted articles are peer reviewed by at least two independent reviewers. All reviewers in the panel do possess excellent research profile. This ensures quality publication in the journal. Further, I take this opportunity to extend my heartfelt gratitude to our reviewers who worked hard in order to filter the novel ones from the contributed articles.

I gratefully acknowledge the members of both editorial board and editorial advisory board for their devotion to the process of betterment of the quality of the journal. I am also thankful to the authors since they considered our journal suitable for showcasing their research work. I am indebted to the concerned stake holders who were instrumental in publishing this issue of the journal in time.

Finally, I invite constructive suggestions from the readers, the contributors of the articles and other concerned persons so that the shortcomings in the journal, if there be any, can be removed in the forthcoming issues.
